Credit card Credit cards, sometimes called charge cards or stored-value cards, are a means of payment that the cardholder or a financial institution issues to a consumer and allows to be used for making purchases on credit. A card typically consists of a plastic card with a magnetic stripe or chip on which account details and an authentication code can be stored. It is also known as a payment card, prepaid card, charge card or depletable. A balance or credit is usually kept on the account, and draws on this balance when the card is used to make a purchase. Some of these cards are "debit cards", meaning that the money on the card is deducted from the cardholder's bank account instead of added to it. If a card holder pays for his purchases by check, cash, or in some other way that is not handled by a bank, the payment for those purchases is handled as a debit to the cardholder's bank account. The card is a form of payment that is accepted in person, by phone, or online. Instant money, no checks required.

Create a new Amazon Payments account with this app. Your chosen credit card will be used for all payments from Amazon.com. Amazon Payments handles the billing on your behalf. It is a way to borrow money. Your employer may offer you a credit card as a reward for a job well done.

Your credit card is the most convenient method of payment for many of the items sold by merchants because it is widely available, almost always accepted, can be used anywhere you have a valid ID, and offers swift confirmation of payment and shipment of the product. Credit cards are considered to be a safer form of payment than cash, because if the item purchased is stolen, the credit card company will cover the loss, unlike if the items is lost and the cash is stolen. The card issuer also offers other kinds of insurance against theft and fraud. In some cases the card issuer will require proof of identity such as a utility bill, mortgage statement or a recent bank statement, usually showing your address. Displaying received video To save cards, press and hold the card for approximately 3 seconds. To share cards with your friends, slide your finger over cards to display the share menu, then select from the list. You can choose to select your photos automatically
